JOINT MEMORANDUM OF LAW

I. Disputed Instruction No. 12 Regarding Elements of Transmitting a Threat in Interstate or Foreign Commerce - Count One

A. Government's Proposed Instruction

1. Text of Proposed Instruction

The defendant is charged in Count One of the Indictment with transmitting threatening communications with intent to extort, in violation of Section 875(d) of Title 18 of the United States Code. In order for the defendant to be found guilty of that charge, the government must prove each of the following elements beyond a reasonable doubt:

First, defendant knowingly sent a communication in interstate commerce containing a true threat to damage the reputation of another, in this case D.B.; and

Second, defendant did so with the intent to extort money or something else of value from D.B.

To act with "intent to extort" means to act with the purpose of obtaining money or something of value from someone who consents because of fear.

2. Government's Position

The government's proposed instruction is consistent with the terms of 18 U.S.C. § 875(d) and the authorities cited in support of Government's Proposed Instruction No. 12.

3. Defendant's Position

The government's instruction reads out the wrongfulness requirement from the elements, and eliminates the claim-of-right defense. See Defendant's Position in Support of Wrongfulness Instruction, Disputed Instruction No. 13.

1 Mr. Brank incorporates the arguments made in support of this 2 instruction in the previous Joint Memorandum of Law Concerning Jury 3 Instructions. Docket No. 72.

B. Defendant's Proposed Instruction

1. Text of Proposed Instruction

Defendant is accused of transmitting a threat in interstate or foreign commerce. It is against federal law to transmit any communication in interstate or foreign commerce that contains any threat to injure a person.

For you to find the defendant guilty of this crime, you must be convinced that the government has proven each of these things beyond a reasonable doubt:

First, that the communication was sent in interstate commerce, meaning that the sender and recipient were located in separate states at the time the message was sent and received;

16 Second, that the defendant intended to transmit the 17 communication; and

18 Third, that the communication contained a true threat to injure 19 someone's reputation.

In determining whether a communication is a true threat you must use find that it meets both an objective and a subjective standard.

22 As to the objective standard, a true threat is one that a 23 reasonable recipient, familiar with the context of the communication, 24 would find threatening and that defendant reasonably should have 25 foreseen would be taken as a threat.

26 As to the subjective standard, a true threat is one that the 27 defendant subjectively intended to be understood as a threat.

1 2. Defendant's Position

2 For Defendant's argument in support of this instruction, please
3 see Defendant's Position in objecting to Government's Disputed 4 Instruction No. 12.

5 3. Government's Position

6 Defendant cites United States v. Bagdasarian, 652 F.3d 1113, 7 1118 (9th Cir. 2011) for the proposition that an objective and 8 subjective analysis is required for evaluating whether the defendant 9 intended the statement to be understood as a threat. However, 10 Bagdasarian addressed the intent requirements of a different statute, 11 18 U.S.C. § 879(a)(3), which criminalizes making true threats to kill 12 or injure a major candidate for President. There, the Ninth Circuit 13 specifically noted that "with respect to some threat statutes, we 14 require that the purported threat meet an objective standard in 15 addition, and for some we do not." Id. at 1117 and n.14 (adding also 16 that 18 U.S.C. §§ 871 does not include an objective and subjective 17 test). Adding a subjective/objective test here is not supported by 18 any Ninth Circuit law, see United States v. Williams, 492 F. App'x 19 777, 779 (9th Cir. 2012) ("This Court has never interpreted § 875 to 20 require proof that a threat was objectively threatening"), and would 21 only serve to confuse the jury about the appropriate intent necessary 22 to commit the offense.

23 Additionally, as discussed in detail below in response to 24 defendant's proposed instruction on wrongfulness, Disputed 25 Instruction No. 13, defendant is not entitled to a "claim of right"

26

27

28

¹ instruction because the threats here were inherently wrongful. See United States v. Villalobos, 748 F.3d 953 (9th Cir. 2014).¹

3 II. Disputed Instruction No. 13 Regarding Wrongfulness – Instruction
4 Requested by Defendant for Counts One, Two, and Five

5 A. Defendant's Proposed Instruction

6 || 1. Text of Proposed Instruction

You must also determine whether the alleged threat was wrongful. A threat is not wrongful if the defendant actually believed that he was entitled to the property he was demanding.

10 You may not find defendant guilty of Count One, Two, or Five 11 unless you find that, in connection with those counts, the defendant 12 did not believe that he was entitled to the property he was 13 demanding.

14 || 2. Defendant's Position

The Hobbs Act defines extortion as "the obtaining of property from another, with his consent, induced by wrongful use of actual or threatened force, violence, or fear, or under color of official right." 18 U.S.C. § 1951(b)(2). Threats of economic harm made to "obtain [] ... property from another," are not generally considered "wrongful," where the alleged extortioner has or believes he has a legitimate claim to the property obtained through such threats. See Levitt v. Yelp! Inc., 765 F.3d 1123, 1131-32 (9th Cir. 2014); Brokerage Concepts, Inc. v. U.S. Healthcare, Inc., 140 F.3d 494, 523 (3d Cir. 1998).

¹ As "there is strong evidence to suggest that Congress intended extortion to mean the same thing in 18 U.S.C. § 875 as it does in the Hobbs Act," see United States v. Coss, 677 F.3d 278, 285 (6th Cir. 2012), the government cites to Ninth Circuit case law addressing wrongfulness in the context of the Hobbs Act, including Villalobos. See Government's Position with regard to Disputed Instruction No. 13.

1 United States v. Enmons is the starting point for the 2 interpretation of "wrongful" in the extortion statute. 410 U.S. 396 3 (1973). Enmons held that the use of violence in a labor strike to 4 obtain higher wages and other benefits did not constitute extortion 5 under the Hobbs Act. Id. at 400. Enmons explained that "[t]he term 6 'wrongful,' which ... modifies the use of each of the enumerated 7 means of obtaining property — actual or threatened force, violence, 8 or fear — would be superfluous if it only served to describe the 9 means used." Id. at 399. Enmons's reasoning "created the claim of 10 right defense to charges of extortion under the Hobbs Act." United 11 States v. Sturm, 870 F.2d 769, 772 (1st Cir. 1989).

12 The Ninth Circuit has declined to extend the claim-of-right 13 defense to the use or threat of violence, because violence is 14 inherently wrongful. United States v. Daane, 475 F.3d 1114, 1119
 15 (9th Cir. 2007).

16 But though the claim-of-right defense has been limited in other 17 contexts, it continues to apply to allegations of extortion involving 18 threats of economic harm. So long as the alleged extortioner seeks 19 payment for services that have some value, he has is entitled to use 20 threats of economic harm. See Levitt, 1131-32 (9th Cir. 2014);
 21 United States v. Villalobos, 748 F.3d 953, 956-57 (9th Cir. 2014);
 22 see also George Lussier Enters., Inc. v. Subaru of New England, Inc., 23 393 F.3d 36, 50 (1st Cir. 2004); Sturm, 870 F.2d at 774. As the 24 Ninth Circuit recently put it,

25 "[T]here is nothing inherently wrongful about the use of 26 economic fear to obtain property." "[T]he fear of 27 economic loss is a driving force of our economy that plays 28 an important role in many legitimate business

1 transactions." Courts must therefore differentiate 2 between legitimate use of economic fear-hard bargaining—and 3 wrongful use of such fear-extortion.

4 "Distinguishing between hard bargaining and extortion can 5 be difficult."

6 United Broth. of Carpenters and Joiners of America v. Building and 7 Const. Trades Dept., AFL-CIO, 770 F.3d 834, 838 (9th Cir. 2014)
8 (citations omitted).

9 There do not appear to be any cases holding that, for the 10 purposes of the Hobbs Act, the use of fear via nonviolent threats to 11 reputation is inherently wrongful. Counsel for Mr. Brank have asked 12 the government to point out such a case; the government has yet to do 13 so. Putting aside the issue of whether nonviolent threats to 14 reputation even fall within the definition of "fear" in the Hobbs 15 Act, it is clear that the claim-of-right defense would apply to such 16 threats, as they would to nonviolent threats of economic harm.

17 Levitt, 765 F.3d at 1131-32.

18 The requirement of wrongfulness and the claim-of-right defense 19 also apply in charges of 18 U.S.C. § 875(d). See United States v.
20 Jackson, 180 F.3d 55, 66-70 (2d Cir. 1999) (applying claim-of-right 21 to 18 U.S.C. § 875(d)); United States v. Klos, CR 11-233-PHX, 2012 WL 22 4120413, at * 3 (D.Ariz. Sept. 19, 2012) (same).

23 Because the claim-of-right defense applies, the government must 24 prove that Mr. Brank knew he was not entitled to the property that he 25 received or attempted to receive. Sturm, 870 F.2d at 774.

26 3. Government's Position

27 The government submits that a separate instruction regarding 28 wrongfulness is not appropriate under the facts of this case, nor

1 does the text of defendant's proposed instruction properly state the 2 law. Defendant's proposed instruction restates and reformulates the 3 "claim of right" instruction found in Ninth Circuit Model Jury
4 Instruction No. 8.142A, Hobbs Act – Extortion or Attempted Extortion 5 by Nonviolent Threat ("A threat is wrongful [if it is unlawful] [or] 6 [if the defendant knew [he] [she] was not entitled to obtain the 7 property]..."). But this instruction is not applicable where the 8 threat is inherently wrongful. See United States v. Villalobos, 748 9 F.3d 953, 956 (9th Cir. 2014) (recognizing that some attempts to 10 obtain property are "so inherently wrongful that whether the 11 defendant had a lawful claim to the property demanded is not relevant 12 in determining whether extortion or attempted extortion has been 13 proven") (citing United States v. Daane, 475 F.3d 1114, 1119 (9th 14 Cir. 2007)); see also Ninth Circuit Model Jury Instruction 8.142 15 (Extortion or Attempted Extortion by Force) (which does not include a 16 claim-of-right/wrongfulness instruction).

17 Here, defendant threatened to disclose embarrassing, sensitive 18 information of a sexual nature about the Victim D.B. on defendant's 19 Twitter account (which has several thousand followers) if D.B.
20 refused to comply with defendant's demands for an Audi R8 and 21 $500,000, and, ultimately, an additional $1 million. Such a threat 22 is always wrongful, regardless of whether defendant actually or 23 reasonably believed that he was entitled to the car and the $1.5
24 million. In the context of a reputational threat, if there is no 25 nexus between the threatened information and the act for which 26 defendant was allegedly seeking compensation, then the use of the 27 threat to attempt to regain the property or proceeds is inherently 28

1 wrongful, see United States v. Jackson, 180 F.3d 55, 70 (2d Cir.
2 1999), and no claim of right defense applies.

3 In Jackson, which involved threats against entertainer Bill
4 Cosby to disclose that Cosby was defendant's father, the Second 5 Circuit Court of Appeals recognized that certain threats to 6 reputation are "inherently wrongful," including threats to disclose 7 "such matters as sexual indiscretions that have no nexus with any 8 plausible claim of right," 180 F.3d at 70; however, the court also 9 held that the question whether there was such a nexus was a question
10 of fact that should have been put to the jury. Id., 180 F.3d at 71.²
11 The government submits that, like violence and threats of violence 12 outside the labor context, threats to publicly disclose information 13 about a victim's private sexual conduct in order to obtain property 14 are inherently (i.e. always) wrongful, regardless of defendant's 15 claim of right to the property demanded, and thus a "claim of right" 16 instruction should not be given in those circumstances. Just as "you 17 cannot beat someone up to collect a debt, even if you believe he owes 18 it to you," Daane, 475 F.3d at 1120 (quoting United States v. Castor, 19 937 F.2d 293 (7th Cir. 1991)), you also cannot expose or threaten to 20 expose a person's sexual secrets in an effort to collect money or

22

23 ² On rehearing, the Second Circuit held that the district
24 court's failure to instruct the jury as to wrongfulness was harmless 25 error because the evidence established that defendant's threat to disclose to a newspaper that Cosby was her father unless Cosby paid defendant $40 million was "inherently wrongful." See United States 26 v. Jackson, 196 F.3d 383, 389 (2d Cir. 1999) ("We are persuaded that no rational juror would reach a different conclusion, and we think it clear beyond a reasonable doubt that, even had the excluded evidence been admitted, the jury would have found these defendants guilty if the court had properly instructed that the threat must be wrongful.").

1 property.³ Moreover, defendant has not proffered any evidence that 2 he had a plausible claim of right to the $1.5 million and the Audi R8
 3 he demanded from the victim in this case. Under these circumstances, 4 the defendant is not entitled to a claim of right defense and the 5 Court need not give a claim-of-right/wrongfulness instruction. See 6 Villalobos, 748 F.3d at 956 (some attempts to obtain property are "so 7 inherently wrongful that whether the defendant had a lawful claim to 8 the property demanded is not relevant in determining whether 9 extortion or attempted extortion has been proven"); see also United 10 States v. Amaro, --- F. App'x ---, 2015 WL 3451773, at *1 (9th Cir.
 11 June 1, 2015) (not error to refuse to give jury instruction because 12 proposed instruction "had no foundation in evidence").

13 Defendant's reliance on cases holding that a claim of right 14 defense is appropriate where the threat of harm is economic is 15 misplaced, as the threats here were not threats of economic harm, but 16 instead threats to injure the victim's personal reputation.⁴

17 _____
 18 ³ For example, if a customer of a company believes the company 19 owes her money for a broken product she received in the mail, and in 20 looking for contact information for the company's CEO, discovers 21 salacious details about the CEO's sex life online, the claim of right 22 defense would not act as a defense if she threatened to tweet about 23 the details of the CEO's sex life if the company did not pay her back 24 for the damaged product. Such a tweet would be inherently wrong, 25 even assuming the customer was entitled to reimbursement for the 26 broken product.

27 ⁴ Should the Court determine that a "claim of 28 right"/wrongfulness instruction is appropriate under facts of this case, the government would request the following instruction:

29 "You must also determine whether the alleged threat was 30 wrongful. A threat to publicly disclose a person's sexual 31 secrets or indiscretions is wrongful where the threat was issued 32 in connection with a claim for money or property to which the 33 defendant had no right and could not reasonably believe he had a 34 right, or which had no nexus (that is, no connection) to a 35 legitimate claim for money or property. A threat is also 36 wrongful where actual disclosure of the threatened information
 37 (footnote cont'd on next page)

1 III. Disputed Instruction No. 14 Regarding Elements of Count Two:

2 Extortion by Nonviolent Threat

3 A. Government's Proposed Instruction

4 1. Text of Instruction

5 The defendant is charged in Count Two of the indictment with 6 extortion by nonviolent threat in violation of Section 1951(a) of 7 Title 18 of the United States Code. In order for the defendant to be 8 found guilty of that charge, the government must prove each of the 9 following elements beyond a reasonable doubt:

10 First, the defendant induced D.B. to part with property by 11 wrongful threat of reputational harm;

12 Second, the defendant acted with the intent to obtain property;

13 Third, commerce from one state to another was affected in some 14 way.

15 2. Defendant's Position

16 The government's proposed instruction reads out the claim-of-17 right defense from the elements by improperly modifying Model 18 Instruction No. 8.142. Mr. Brank's regarding this point is set out 19 above in his position in support of Defendant's Disputed Instruction 20 No. 13 on Wrongfulness.

21 Moreover, the government's instructions improperly modify the 22 Model Instruction by replacing "fear" with "wrongful threat of 23 reputational harm." The threat of reputational harm is not 24 cognizable as "fear" under the Hobbs Act. Mr. Brank is unaware of a 25 case in which reputational harm has been held to be cognizable as 26 would frustrate, rather than facilitate, the prospect of 27 payment."

28 See Jackson, 180 F.3d at 71 (laying out framework outlined in government's proposed instruction).

1 "fear" for purposes of the Hobbs Act. Yet, that is how the 2 government has explicitly charged this case. See Indictment, Count 3 Two and Five.

4 The government's instruction fails to make clear that it is the 5 government's burden to prove that defendant knew he was not entitled 6 to the property he received or attempted to receive. Sturm, 870 F.2d 7 at 774.

8 B. Defendant's Proposed Instruction

9 1. Text of Instruction

10 The defendant is charged in Count Two of the indictment with 11 extortion by fear in violation of Section 1951(a) of Title 18 of the 12 United States Code. In order for the defendant to be found guilty of 13 that charge, the government must prove each of the following elements
14 beyond a reasonable doubt:

15 First, the defendant induced D.B. to part with property by the 16 wrongful use of actual or threatened fear;

17 Second, the defendant acted with the intent to obtain property
18 that the defendant knew he was not entitled to receive;

19 Third, commerce from one state to another was affected in some 20 way.

21 "Fear" means the fear of physical or economic harm.

22 2. Government's Position

23 The government reiterates its position vis-à-vis defendant's 24 "claim of right" defense, as articulated in its objection to 25 defendant's Proposed Instruction No. 13. Moreover, the government 26 notes that its instruction, and particularly element two, tracks the 27 language of model instruction 8.142A, which is the applicable 28 instruction here. Defendant appears to be relying on a former

1 version of model instruction 8.142, as the current version does not 2 contain the language "that the defendant knew he was not entitled to 3 receive." See Model Jury Instruction 8.142 (Hobbs Act - Extortion or 4 Attempted Extortion by Force) (approved 6/2014).

5 As to defendant's assertion that "fear" means only fear of 6 physical or economic harm, that argument lacks a basis in law. In 7 United States v. Pascucci, 943 F.2d 1032 (9th Cir. 1991), the Court
 8 of Appeals affirmed defendant's convictions under 18 U.S.C. §§ 1951 9 and 875(d), where defendant threatened to disclose evidence of an 10 extramarital affair to the victim's wife and employer if the victim 11 did not pay defendant several thousand dollars. As is the case here, 12 the threat to the victim's reputation via disclosure of a sexual 13 secret formed the basis of the extortion charges in Pascucci.

14 Moreover, as noted above, there is strong evidence to suggest 15 that Congress intended extortion to mean the same thing in 18 U.S.C.
 16 § 875 as it does in the Hobbs Act, and Section 875(d) clearly 17 encompasses threats to reputation. See Jackson, 180 F.3d at 70
 18 ("Given Congress's contemporaneous consideration of the predecessors 19 of § 875(d) and the Hobbs Act, both of which focused on extortion, we 20 infer that Congress's concept of extortion was the same with respect 21 to both statutes."). Although a large number of cases under the 22 Hobbs Act involve fear of physical or economic harm, the statute does 23 not limit the definition of extortion to those circumstances only.
 24 See United States v. Abelis, 146 F.3d 73, 83 (2d Cir. 1998) (noting 25 that Hobbs Act "leaves open the cause of the fear"). Indeed, as 26 others have noted, the Hobbs Act and its predecessor, the Anti-27 Racketeering Act of 1934, 18 U.S.C. §§ 420a-420e, were modeled after 28 New York law, which provided that fear, "such as will constitute

1 extortion, may be induced by a threat . . . to expose any secret."

2 See N.Y. Penal Code, § 553 (1881) (discussed in James Lindgren, The 3 Elusive Distinction Between Bribery and Extortion: From the Common 4 Law to the Hobbs Act, 35 UCLA L. Rev. 815, 834 (1988)); see also 5 Evans v. United States, 504 U.S. 255 (1992) (noting that Hobbs Act 6 amended Anti-Racketeering Act, which was modeled on NY law); United 7 States v. Cortes, 757 F.3d 850, 865 (9th Cir. 2014) ("Congress 8 modeled the Hobbs Act after the New York Penal Code"); United 9 States v. Jackson, 180 F.3d at 68 (noting that "the substance of 10 the[] prohibitions" of the Anti-Racketeering Act and Hobbs Act "is 11 the same").

12 IV. Disputed Instruction No. 16 Regarding Elements of Counts Three 13 and Four: Receiving Proceeds of Extortion

14 A. Government's Proposed Instruction

15 1. Text of Instruction

16 The defendant is charged in Counts Three and Four of the 17 indictment with receiving proceeds/property of extortion in violation 18 of Section 880 of Title 18 of the United States Code. In order for 19 the defendant to be found guilty of that charge, the government must 20 prove each of the following elements beyond a reasonable doubt:

21 First, defendant received, possessed, concealed, or disposed of 22 money or other property;

23 Second, the property was obtained from the commission of the 24 offense charged in count one, namely, transmitting threatening 25 communications with intent to extort;

26 Third, the offense is punishable by imprisonment for more than 27 one year; and

1 Fourth, defendant knew the money or other property had been 2 unlawfully obtained.

3 2. Government's Position

4 The government's instruction applies the plain terms of the 5 statute, which can be readily understood by the jury. The jury will 6 have been instructed as to "intent to extort" under Count One.

7 3. Defendant's Position

8 The defense and the government are in agreement as to the 9 substance of Proposed Instruction No. 16 and the elements of 18 10 U.S.C. § 880. The dispute, therefore, is only as to the manner in 11 which the jury instruction is worded. There is essentially no
12 authority on jury instructions for 18 U.S.C. § 880. There is no
13 Ninth Circuit model instruction nor is there case law that addresses 14 jury instructions for this statute.

15 The defense respectfully submits that its proposed instruction 16 makes clear that Mr. Brank had to have known that the property and 17 money transferred to him by D.B. was unlawfully obtained. This is 18 clear from the statute, which requires that the money or property was 19 obtained through a violation of 18 U.S.C. § 875(d) and that the 20 defendant knew the money or property had been unlawfully obtained.

21 See 18 U.S.C. § 880.

22 B. Defendant's Proposed Instruction

23 1. Text of Instruction

24 The defendant is charged in Counts Three and Four of the 25 indictment with knowingly receiving proceeds/property of extortion in 26 violation of Section 880 of Title 18 of the United States Code.

27 In order for the defendant to be found guilty of this charge, 28 you must find that the government proved the following elements

1 beyond a reasonable doubt:

2 First, Defendant received, possessed, concealed, or disposed of 3 money or other property;

4 Second, the money or property was the result of the offense
5 charged in count one, namely, transmitting threatening communications 6 with intent to extort; and

7 Third, Defendant knew he was receiving money or property 8 illegally at the time that it was transferred to him.

9 If you find that the defendant believed, in his own mind, that 10 the money or property was rightfully transferred to him, then he did 11 not know he was receiving money or property illegally.

12 2. Government's Position

13 Defendant's proposed element number three ("Third, Defendant
14 knew he was receiving money or property illegally at the time that it 15 was transferred to him.") does not correctly state the law or reflect 16 the charges in the indictment. Section 880's requirement that 17 defendant know that the property was unlawfully obtained applies not 18 only to receipt of the money or property, but also to possession, 19 concealment and disposal of such property. Thus, the law does not 20 require that defendant know that he was receiving money or property 21 illegally "at the time that it was transferred to him." The 22 government has charged Counts Three and Four in the conjunctive 23 (i.e., defendant "received, possessed, concealed, and disposed of" 24 money and property unlawfully obtained) and submits that its 25 instruction captures all such conduct.

26 As to defendant's proposed claim of right instruction, the 27 government respectfully refers back to its position above.

1 V. Disputed Instruction No. 17 Regarding Elements of Count Five:

2 Attempted Extortion by Nonviolent Threat

3 A. Government's Proposed Instruction

4 1. Text of Instruction

5 The defendant is charged in Count Five of the indictment with 6 attempted extortion by nonviolent threat in violation of Section 7 1951(a) of Title 18 of the United States Code. In order for the 8 defendant to be found guilty of that charge, the government must 9 prove each of the following elements beyond a reasonable doubt:

10 First, the defendant intended to induce D.B. to part with 11 property by wrongful threat of reputational harm;

12 Second, the defendant acted with the intent to obtain property;

13 Third, commerce from one state to another would have been 14 affected in some way; and

15 Fourth, the defendant did something that was a substantial step 16 toward committing the crime.

17 2. Government's Position

18 The government's proposed instruction tracks the Ninth Circuit
19 model instruction, 8.142A, except as to the claim of right defense, 20 which the government submits does not apply here.

21 3. Defendant's Position

22 See Defendant's Objection to Government's Disputed Instruction
23 No. 14.

24 B. Defendant's Proposed Instruction

25 1. Text of Instruction

26 The defendant is charged in Count Five of the indictment with 27 extortion by fear in violation of Section 1951(a) of Title 18 of the 28 United States Code. In order for the defendant to be found guilty of

1 that charge, the government must prove each of the following elements
2 beyond a reasonable doubt:

3 First, the defendant induced D.B. to part with property by the 4 wrongful use of actual or threatened fear;

5 Second, the defendant acted with the intent to obtain property
6 that the defendant knew he was not entitled to receive;

7 Third, commerce from one state to another was affected in some 8 way;

9 Fourth, the defendant did something that was a substantial step
10 toward committing the crime.

11 "Fear" means the fear of physical or economic harm.

12 2. Government's Position

13 The government submits that its proposed instruction more 14 accurately describes the law of attempt.

15 For the reasons stated above, the claim of right defense does 16 not apply to the facts of the case.

17 Finally, neither the statute nor the case law support 18 defendant's contention that fear means fear of physical or economic 19 harm. As noted above, the Hobbs Act also encompasses fear of 20 reputational harm.

21 VI. Disputed Instruction No. 18 Regarding Elements of Count Six: Use 22 of an Interstate Facility to Facilitate an Unlawful Activity

23 A. Government's Proposed Instruction

24 1. Text of Instruction

25 The defendant is charged in Count Six of the indictment with 26 violating Section 1952(a)(3) of Title 18 of the United States Code.
27 In order for the defendant to be found guilty of that charge, the 28

1 government must prove each of the following elements beyond a
2 reasonable doubt:

3 First, the defendant used a facility of interstate or foreign 4 commerce, namely a cellular telephone, with the intent to promote, 5 manage, establish, or carry on, or facilitate the promotion, 6 management, establishment, or carrying on of an unlawful activity, 7 namely, extortion offenses in violation of the laws of the State of 8 California and of the United States;

9 Second, after doing so the defendant attempted to perform acts 10 to promote, manage, establish, carry on, or facilitate the promotion, 11 management, establishment, and carrying on of, the extortion; and 12 Third, the defendant did something that was a substantial step 13 toward committing the crime.

14 Mere preparation is not a substantial step toward committing the 15 crime. To constitute a substantial step, a defendant's act or 16 actions must demonstrate that the crime will take place unless 17 interrupted by independent circumstances.

18 2. Government's Position

19 The government's proposed instruction tracks the Ninth Circuit's 20 model jury instruction, 8.144, as modified for attempt.

21 3. Defendant's Position

22 As with Disputed Instruction 16, the defense and the government 23 agree as to the substance of Disputed Instruction No. 18. The 24 instruction proposed by the defense seeks to clarify, for the jury, 25 that 18 U.S.C. 1952(a)(3) requires that the defendant intended to 26 conduct an unlawful activity at the time that the facility of 27 interstate commerce was used. See United States v. Vaccaro, 28 abrogated on other grounds by Huddleston v. United States, 485 U.S.

1 681 (1988) ("it must be proved, not that the defendants knew 2 interstate facilities were being utilized, but only that they knew 3 they were facilitating an unlawful activity"); United States v.
4 Smith, 789 F.2d 196, 204 (3d Cir. 1986)(Travel Act "requires proof 5 that the 'individual used the facility of interstate commerce with 6 the specific intent to promote, manage, establish or carry on an 7 unlawful activity'"); United States v. Johnson, 961 F.2d 1488, 1491
8 (10th Cir. 1992) ("To establish a 'Travel Act' violation, the proof
9 at trial must show that the Appellant: '(1) traveled or used 10 facilities in interstate commerce; (2) with the intent to promote, 11 manage, establish, carry on or facilitate the promotion, management, 12 establishment, or carrying on of a prohibited activity; and (3) 13 thereafter attempted to or did in fact engage in one of the 14 proscribed activities.'(internal quotation omitted)).

15 B. Defendant's Proposed Instruction

16 1. Text of Instruction

17 The defendant is charged in Count Six of the indictment with 18 violating Section 1952(a)(3) of Title 18 of the United States Code.
19 In order for the defendant to be found guilty, you must find that the 20 government proved each of the following elements beyond a reasonable 21 doubt:

22 First, the defendant used a facility of interstate commerce, 23 namely, a cellular phone;

24 Second, at the time he used the cellular phone, the defendant 25 intended to promote, manage, establish, or carry on, or facilitate 26 the promotion, management, establishment, or carrying on of an 27 unlawful activity, namely, extortion offenses in violation of 28 California and federal law;

1 Third, after using a cellular phone for an unlawful activity, 2 defendant attempted to promote, manage, establish, or carry on, or 3 facilitate the promotion, management, establishment, or carrying on 4 of an unlawful activity;

5 Fourth, the defendant did something that was a substantial step
6 toward committing the crime.

7 If, when using the cellular phone, defendant did not intend to 8 commit acts related to an unlawful activity, he did not possess the 9 intent that is required for a conviction under this statute.

10 In addition, mere preparation is not a substantial step toward 11 committing a crime. To constitute a substantial step, a defendant's 12 act or actions must demonstrate that the crime will take place unless 13 interrupted by independent circumstances.

14 2. Government's Position

15 The additional "clarification" proposed by defendant is 16 unnecessary given the clear language in the model instruction that 17 defendant must have used a facility of interstate commerce "with the 18 intent" to commit acts related to the unlawful activity.

19 VII. Disputed Instruction No. 19 Regarding Elements of Count Seven:

20 Possession of a Firearm in Furtherance of a Crime of Violence

21 A. Government's Proposed Instruction

22 1. Text of Instruction

23 The defendant is charged in Count Seven of the indictment with 24 carrying a firearm during and in relation to a crime of violence in 25 violation of Section 924(c) of Title 18 of the United States Code.
26 In order for the defendant to be found guilty of that charge, the 27 government must prove each of the following elements beyond a
28 reasonable doubt:

1 First, the defendant committed the crime of attempted extortion
2 as charged in Count Five of the indictment, which I instruct you is a 3 crime of violence;

4 Second, the defendant knowingly possessed a firearm, namely a 5 Colt revolver; and

6 Third, the defendant possessed the firearm in furtherance of the 7 crime of attempted extortion, as charged in Count Five of the 8 indictment.

9 "Firearm" means any weapon which will or is designed to or may 10 readily be converted to expel a projectile by the action of an 11 explosive.

12 A person "possesses" a firearm if the person knows of its 13 presence and has physical control of it, or knows of its presence and 14 has the power and intention to control it.

15 More than one person can be in possession of something if each 16 knows of its presence and has the power and intention to control it.

17 2. Government's Position

18 Count Seven of the indictment charges defendant with possessing 19 a firearm, namely a .357 caliber Colt Python revolver, in furtherance 20 of a crime of violence. The government's proposed jury instruction, 21 which has been revised from the government's initial proposed 22 instruction, follows Ninth Circuit Model Jury Instruction 8.72 23 (Firearms - Possession in Furtherance of Crime of Violence). The 24 government submits that the possession and joint possession language 25 from Model Jury Instruction 3.17 are necessary given the facts of 26 this case, namely that defendant had the firearm in his possession 27 (in his backpack) and instructed another individual to use the

1 firearm, if necessary, at the time and place of the attempted 2 extortion on or about March 4, 2015.

3 3. Defendant's Position

4 As an initial point, Defendant would object to the giving of 5 this instruction, because Count Five is not a crime of violence. See 6 Docket Nos. 97 & 165.

7 Moreover, the government's proposed instruction needlessly 8 modifies the Model Instruction (8.71). Mr. Brank would request that 9 the Court, if it gives an instruction on this charge, simply apply 10 the Model Instruction set out at 8.72, which is the instruction for 11 possession of a firearm in furtherance of a crime of violence, which 12 is what Count Seven charges. See First Superseding Indictment.

13 The government's approach mixes and conflates separate 14 instructions. The instruction should be given as a possession in 15 furtherance charge. See First Superseding Indictment. The 16 government wants the benefit of the "during and in relation to"
17 language from Model Instruction 8.71, while blending that instruction 18 with the possession language from Model Instruction 8.72. There is 19 no need to add the language from Model Instruction 3.17. Model
20 Instruction 3.17, in any event, refers the reader to Model
21 Instructions 8.71 and 8.72 for 18 U.S.C. § 924(c) charges. Mr. Brank
22 is unaware of any case in this Circuit that has ever applied the 3.17 23 joint possession language to a 18 U.S.C. § 924(c) charge. If the 24 government is aware of such a case, it should point it out.

25 B. Defendant's Proposed Instruction

26 1. Text of Instruction

27 The defendant is charged in Count Seven of the indictment with 28 possessing a firearm in furtherance of Attempted Extortion Affecting

1 Interstate Commerce by Nonviolent Threat in violation of Section 2 924(c) of Title 18 of the United States Code. In order for the 3 defendant to be found guilty of that charge, the government must 4 prove each of the following elements beyond a reasonable doubt:

5 First, the defendant committed the crime of Attempted Extortion 6 Affecting Interstate Commerce as charged in Count Five of the 7 indictment, which I instruct you is a crime of violence;

8 Second, the defendant knowingly possessed the Colt revolver
9 during and in relation to the crime;

10 Third, the defendant possessed the firearm in furtherance of the 11 crime of Attempted Extortion Affecting Interstate Commerce.

12 A person "possesses" a firearm if the person knows of its 13 presence and has physical control of it, or knows of its presence and 14 has the power and intention to control it.

15 2. Government's Position

16 The government respectfully refers back to its position in 17 support of Government's Proposed Instruction No. 19.
